DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

At the end of Schneider Road on Tuckahoe Neck stands a small frame farmhouse constructed around the second quarter of the 19th century. The building is composed of three small modules, each representing a room. Its tall part is two bays wide plus a small door squeezed beside one of the first story windows adjacent the one story wing. On the first story are 6/9 sash windows with 20th century batten shutters and on the second story the windows have 6/6 sash and shutters. At the northeast end of the steep 'A' roof is a substantial brick chimney. Across half of each facade is a very plain porch.

The northeast wing is also two bays long with 6/9 sash and batten shutters and like the remainder of the house, is covered with plain weatherboard. On its northeast gable is a window on each story. To the north west is a third section about the same area but lower than the others. It has a brick flue on its northwest gable and a small porch on the southwest side.

The interior has a single plain room in each section with stair ascending in the tall part on its northwest wall. The second floor has two rooms and stair cubicle in the tallest part with exposed whitewashed joists. Otherwise the house is very plain.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

This farmhouse is significant as a form of vernacular building which is similar to the Willie Bailey House near Federalsburg and a house which formerly stood on a farm north of Grove. The simplicity of the structure is indicative of the financial condition of the owner/builder in the 19th century as well as the fertility of his land.
